2	This is an interview of Yogananda Pittman, conducted by the
3	House Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the United States
4	Capitol, pursuant to House Resolution 503.
5	Chief Pittman, could you please state your full name and spell all of it for the
6	record?
7	Chief Pittman. Yogananda Pittman. Y-o-g-a-n-a-n-d-a, last name Pittman,
8	P-i-t-t-m-a-n.
9	. Good afternoon. Thank you.
10	I'd like to ask everyone in the virtual room today well, I'll introduce my side,
11	actually, for the record. Present here, myself,
12	counsel for the select committee. is present and will be asking questions
13	He's also investigative counsel for the select committee. And I see present and
14	potentially going to participate as well,, senior investigative counsel
15	for the select committee, and who is a researcher for the select committee
16	I'll ask now I think there's only your counsel present for the United States
17	Capitol Police. If she, Lisa Walters, would introduce herself for the record.
18	Ms. Walters. Hi. Can you hear me?
19	· Yes.
20	Ms. Walters. Lisa Walters, senior counsel with the Office of the General Counse
21	for the United States Capitol Police. Tad DiBiase, the general counsel, will also be
22	joining us shortly.
23	. Thank you so much.
24	And to add on our side as well, I see present is also
25	staff member for the select committee.

1	l bel	ieve I've gotten everyone outside of administrative staff.
2	Chie	f Pittman, this will be a staff-led interview, and members, of course, may
3	choose to a	lso ask questions if they join the call.
4	Befo	re we begin, I'd like to describe a few ground rules. There is an official
5	reporter tra	nscribing the record of this interview. Please wait until each question is
6	completed	pefore you begin your response. And we will try to wait until your response
7	is complete	before we ask our next question.
8	The	stenographer cannot record nonverbal responses such as shaking your head,
9	so it is impo	rtant that you answer each question with an audible, verbal response. We
10	ask that you	provide complete answers based on your best recollection. If the question
11	is not clear,	please ask for clarification. If you do not know the answer, please simply
12	say so. Ar	d I also want to remind you that it is unlawful to deliberately provide false
13	information	to Congress. You will have also an opportunity to review the transcript
14	once it is co	mplete.
15		EXAMINATION
16		BY STATE OF THE ST
17	Q	So I'll begin. Chief Pittman, if you can just tell us where you currently worl
18	А	I currently work in the chief's office. My area of responsibility includes the
19	Protective a	nd Intelligence Operations side of the House.
20	Q	And what's your current title?
21	А	Assistant chief of police.
22	Q	What was your position back on January 6th of 2021?
23	А	On January 6th, 2021, I was the assistant chief of police for the Protective
24	and Intellig	ence Operations.
25	Q	When did you assume that title?

1	A I believe that I was promoted in late 2019, somewhere between October and
2	November of '19.
3	Q And may you briefly describe your professional experience leading up to
4	your appointment as assistant chief.
5	A Absolutely. I came on to Capitol Police 2001. Started as a PFC right after
6	9/11, the day of 9/11. From there, I worked numerous divisions throughout the
7	department, to include the Capitol, House, and Senate division. Went through a steady
8	stream of promotions starting in 2005 or 2006. In 2012, I was promoted to captain and
9	assigned to the Capitol division. From there, I went to the Office of Improvement and
10	Accountability I believe in 2015. After that office, I worked for the Command and 11	Coordination Bureau within Capitol Police. And from that position, I attained the rank of
12	assistant chief of police for Protective and Intelligence Operations, a role that I occupy
13	now.
14	Q I want to talk to you about the intelligence and leading up to January 6th.
15	As the assistant chief of the Protective and Intelligence Operations back on January 6th
16	and before, can you describe the role you served in relation to the Intelligence and
17	Interagency Coordination Division, which I will refer to going forward as IICD?
18	A Yes. IICD is a division within the Protective Services Bureau. And under
19	my area of responsibility, prior to January 6th, Protective Services Bureau as well as the
20	Security Services Bureau fall fell under my purview. And IICD is one of those divisions
21	within the Protective Services Bureau.
22	Q So can you briefly describe what your job description as it relates to IICD?
23	So what sorts of things got elevated to you? What sort of things were you involved in
24	dealing with the IICD?
25	A Absolutely. So for IICD, when I first came over, I was in charge of the

1	division itself. There were conversations about making changes to IICD in terms of the
2	organizational structure, but I would say in a nutshell they were responsible for many of
3	the things that they are responsible for right now, and that is to develop intelligence
4	products.

They have an open source section that does various assessments for any type of large scale events. There's daily demonstrations, as you know, on Capitol Hill. They do assessments of those events. They do assessments of events of DPD for specialized Members may be on travel and such. And so when those assessments are done, those products are completed. They essentially come up through the deputy chief that's responsible for Protective Services Bureau as well. After that person reviews that information, it is sent to me for signatures.

- Who was in the role of the deputy chief of Protective Services Bureau on January 6th and before that?
 - Α That would have been Deputy Chief Sean Gallagher.
- Q And outside of signing certain products, how -- how was your role as the assistant chief different in the day-to-day treatment of IICD than Deputy Chief Gallagher's would be?
- Α Deputy Chief Gallagher is going to probably have a more hands-on role, so to speak. Even in the positioning of where he sits, his office is housed within those particular units that he's in charge of. So there's day-to-day communication. Sean and I are having conversations about the products, if there's any question. I review his work. If I have any questions for him, it may get sent back. But he has a more hands-on role with the director of IICD reporting directly to him.
- Q Only a few months before January 6th the new director and assistant director were hired for IICD. How would you characterize the reputation of IICD within the department and potentially more broadly before the hiring of those two new hires?

A I'm not sure how to answer how I would characterize the reputation of IICD.

I can -- what I can say is that when I was assigned to the Protective Services Bureau, it was made clear to me by the former chief, as well as several stakeholders within the congressional community, to include the Sergeant at Arms, that change was recommended and change was necessary.

Q Why? What were you told that -- as to why change was necessary, and what sort of change?

A I would say that the reasons why is because intelligence is a crucial and key component to the organization. These stakeholders demanded more from the intelligence operations. They were seeking information. They wanted to expand the partnerships between the department as well as their respective units that do intelligence. They were not satisfied with the performance of the previous intelligence director.

Q So how did you conceive of IICD's role? And I'll give you some options that limit it to that, but did you -- at the time, did you perceive it as an intelligence gathering operation, an intelligence sharing operation, merely an intelligence consuming operation, neither, all three? What was its objective? What was its aim at least before any changes were instituted to the leadership there?

A I would say that it was supposed to be all three. I think that prior to those changes being implemented, there were significant improvements that needed to be made. So your intelligence unit should be gathering, consuming, and disseminating information to the workforce, to its partners. And to a large extent, they did. It just was -- it needed to be more effective.

There were training gaps, communication gaps. There were several gaps that

1	were identified, and the department leadership wanted to go in a different direction.
2	IICD had largely, prior to January 6th or when Jack Donohue came on, had the same
3	director probably for 10 to 15 years. So it was time for a change, and the direction was
4	that change was going to start at the top.
5	Q	Before the hiring and you've mentioned Jack Donohue as director of IICD
6	and Julie Farnam as assistant director did IICD have a say on the operational side of the
7	department, or have a seat at the table is more the language I think I would use? How
8	would you characterize that?
9	А	If there are major events or planning where you're looking for your IICD to
LO	give you the intelligence that they're hearing about a specific event, yes, that information
l1	is definitely considered.
12	Q	And I'm sorry if my question was not clear. I was talking before January
L3	6th, I think	because you used present tense. I meant was how did that work before
L4	the hiring even of the two new heads of IICD in terms of whether IICD was listened to,
L5	how much of a role they had in operations, or the intelligence that they gathered in 16	operations?	? How would you characterize that?
L7	Α	I would say that they did have a role. There was communications between
L8	the IICD dir	ector at that time and the operational assistant chief of police.
L9	Q	Were there any issues of silos, of the IICD being siloed off from other
20	sections of	the department?
21	Α	l would say yes.
22	Q	And before I'm going to ask you to go into that, I just want to acknowledge that Congressman Pete Aguilar has joined the conversation.

interject with any questions.

Good afternoon. You let me know, Congressman, of course, if you want to

23

So, Chief Pittman, if you could, you said yes, so can you describe that for me?

What was that issue in terms of silos?

A I think there were silos within the department on how information was particularly shared. One of -- or there are several OIG recommendations for how IICD is operating and functioning now, but some of those things that were identified were that we needed to have specific detailed standard operating procedures and policies on how we're going to share the information between IICD and the operational components of the department, who that information was going to be reported to. For example, there were gaps in how far the information was being shared up the chain. So I think those are a couple of examples of where we've identified gaps.

Q So if you could just describe, how was intelligence shared with the leadership before January 6th?

A There would be communications. There were command staff meetings with Chief Gallagher. If there is a special event assessment that was to be completed, you want to know if there's going to -- how many people are going to be involved, whether these groups involved civil disturbance of any sort, were there any Members going to be either targeted or participating in a particular event. There is information shared from and between our law enforcement partners within the region. Capitol Police belongs to a couple of working components. For example, the mutual council of governments. We do a law enforcement brief with law enforcement partners in the area. So those things were taking place prior to January 6th.

Q In terms of you mentioned Deputy Chief Gallagher would be at some of these meetings and that would be -- would he be the conduit by which intelligence would get shared with leadership?

A I would say yes.

1	Q I know that there were two calls, and we'll get into them, conference calls,
2	though, with IICD's head, so Mr. Donohue and Ms. Farnam, prior to January 6th. But
3	can you help me, were there was there a weekly before January 6th, a weekly or a
4	monthly or a consistent call on which the heads of IICD were present with the leadership
5	of Capitol Police, or did that was that not instituted before January 6th?
6	A Not in the manner in which it's instituted now. So there are it's a daily
7	call now that the IICD director hosts every day at 12 noon, and we have operational
8	commanders as well as leadership from the department, those that have the clearances
9	to be on the call, as well as members of the Sergeant at Arms or Capitol Police force.
10	So they weren't happening that frequently. There were calls prior to January
11	6th, but it's definitely been a significant improvement post-January 6th compared to what
12	we were doing before.
13	Q And Assistant Chief Gallagher has told us that it was two, one in December
14	and then one on January 4th. Does that sound right to you, calls in which
15	A On January 6th?
16	Q Any calls in which Ms. Farnam and Mr. Donohue were both present in terms
17	of giving a threat landscape to leadership.
18	A I don't have the information in front of me, but I don't doubt that it would
19	have been two calls in reference to January 6th to give a landscape picture to the
20	department, to those commanders that were participating in that call.
21	Q Did you approve or oversee any changes in IICD in the period after Ms.
22	Farnam and Mr. Donohue's hiring and before January 6th?
23	A Did I approve what I'm sorry, repeat that.
24	Q Sure. Were there any changes in IICD in which you had a hand in either
25	approving or overseeing in the period between when Ms. Farnam and Mr. Donohue were

- hired on January 6th? And I know that that is a very brief period, so if there were none,
- there were none. I was just wondering if any of the changes that you and other
- members of the leadership team were seeking from IICD, whether any of those were
- 4 implemented before January 6th and if you had a role in that?

A I think the question is a little broad. There were numerous changes from bringing on Jack and Julie. And I would say absolutely I had a role in that. I directed that entire process. So prior to January 6th, U.S. Capitol Police did a nationwide search to bring on Jack and Julie, but that was a whole process in and of itself.

There were a number of meetings with pretty much everyone in the IC community. I went to several different Federal agencies to meet with directors, share with them some of my challenges, what I was looking for, what I wanted to do here at Capitol Police. And just seek out information, if you were looking for a new director, these were your challenges, what would you suggest to me?

And so after completing that process, of course, we conducted the interviews.

And there was one selection that didn't quite pan out for Capitol Police. And through the course of that, instead of going with just selecting Jack, I asked the chief -- the former chief at that time could we bring on an assistant director as well, because we knew there were a number of significant challenges that that new director coming on was going to have to face to start to implement change.

And I don't know that I'm touching on your question, but I do feel it was a little broad, so hopefully that answers. If not, if you could give me some more specifics, I'll attempt to answer that as well.

Q Sure. So I'm actually looking for specifics. And if the only change is in bringing on Mr. Donohue and Ms. Farnam, that's fine. But, you know, you said that they were brought on to bring about changes in IICD. My question is, what changes were put in place in IICD, if any, before January 6th?

A Well, I think that there was limited time for change, but I do think there were a number of things that were requested and expectations that were set. We had staffing challenges prior to them coming on. So there was an expectation that we would bring on additional staff. There were training challenges prior to them coming on.

After a review of many of the analysts' records and performance evaluations, I did have concerns about the training or lack thereof. So I wanted them to develop a training program.

So all of those things that we were looking for to expand our collaboration in the intelligence community, I want to say that Jack had only probably been here maybe 60 days. I'd have to go back and look at the record, but there definitely had to be a time to assess what he had. I wanted a review of the intelligence products that they were using to make sure that we were using the best things on the market, a review of our policies to make sure that our policies and procedures were kind of best practices of others in the business.

But you're essentially, talking about a very narrow window of time. So, yes, there were expectations set forth, but as far as the implementation of those things, it wasn't just a hiring of them. It was all the things that we sat down and discussed these [inaudible] 90-day plan. In 90 days we need to come back, oh, you've had time to assess? We've looked at A, B, C, and D, and then this is going to be the roadmap to going forward.

So while we identified those gaps prior to January 6th, January 6th happened.

And then, of course, there's a change in plans, so to speak. And we went in a different direction as far as some, I guess, immediacy. It had to happen a lot faster. And we were under a lot of more reviews by outside entities to say these things need to happen.

But they weren't unbeknownst to Capitol Police prior to the insurrection.

Q And so, I guess, to put a finer point on it, precise as you said, my question deals with only a matter of about maybe 70 days. Were the problems leadership sought to solve by hiring new leaders within IICD still present by January 6th? And did those problems, in your opinion, result in being less prepared in the lead-up to January 6th?

A I think that there were challenges prior to January 6th. I don't necessarily know that that resulted in Capitol Police being less prepared on the 6th. I think as with any organization, you're always looking to improve. And there are challenges now, but once you acknowledge those challenges, then you have to take about some type of actionable change. And that doesn't necessarily happen overnight.

So I do think that they did a good job in gathering information. We were probably one of the only law enforcement agencies that produced the type of intelligence product prior to January 6th that -- that detailed -- I mean, we've gone over a lot of those details in our assessment. But, with that said, could there have been better communications? Absolutely. The way we distributed that information, absolutely those were challenges. And the conflicting information from the different reports.

So those are all improvements that we've made since, but we own them and acknowledge that those things could have and should have been done better.

Q And a lot of our conversation today will be about all the improvements that Capitol Police has made since January 6th. I'm starting off chronologically, so a lot of this is going to be backward looking. If you would, you know, humor me, bear with me a little bit since I know that there are, again, a lot of things moving forward that have been improved upon and changed.

But in terms of still looking back at the period before January 6th, you mentioned sharing. So I want to ask about that. What was the level of sharing, let's start with outside groups, your partners, and the lead-up to January 6th? Was it at the level that you think was sufficient or was that still a problem, a challenge that IICD was working through and trying to improve when January 6th happened?

A I think that that was a problem that they were still trying to improve when January 6th happened. There was limited team -- regular team meetings.

Expectations for the analysts were starting to be communicated, particularly by assistant director at that time, Farnam, reviewing of those individual analysts, what their training had been previously, how they were assembling those products that they were distributing to officers. A lot of the communication was via email, so --

And then I know you're going to ask about the changes going forward, so I'll leave that for what are we doing differently today.

Q All right. I would like to talk about the threat assessment you mentioned at the January 3rd bulletin produced by IICD for January 6th. I know you've had -- I'm sure you've had an opportunity to look at that final threat assessment for quite a bit, but if you have it in front of you, if you want to, you know -- if I refer to anything that you want to look at, you may of course.

Let me ask you generally and, again, it may be that this was sort of drafted and developed at a level below you, but what role, if any, did you play in the drafting, editing, or development of that document?

A I did not play a role in the drafting of the document. We do play a role in the editing of the document. And when I say we, if it comes up and I have a question about something I'm not quite comfortable, or if I see some analysis and I'm like, well, why would we say A, B, C, or D, then there would be a conversation, and it could be sent back for additional edits or analysis.

Q And I think you were describing how that might happen generally, right?

- You're saying you don't think that that happened in this case, at least as it pertains to you
- 2 in terms of editing or sending anything back. Is that right?
- 3 A In terms of edit -- no. No.

- 4 Q And so when -- yeah. I'm sorry. Go ahead.
- A Let me put that in context. In terms of editing or sending anything back, no. But to say that there wasn't conversation between Chief Gallagher and I on what he saw, what he was suggesting to have my concurrence, that wouldn't be accurate. But specifically for me to say, oh, you should change this paragraph, no, I did not.

 - Q Okay. Tell me about those conversations. What was it that you recall Deputy Chief Gallagher talking to you about, you know, what he was seeing, what he wanted to say in the assessment, and what did you respond back?
 - A I would say that they mostly involved around the differences between MAGA 1, MAGA 2. And then this being a -- more of a situation where the rhetoric or feeling or sentiment that Congress was going to be the target, and folks received this as a last chance attempt to disrupt the counting of the votes.
 - I thought I had the assessment. I don't think I need it.
 - Q Okay. And so -- and I know this was a long time ago. Can you recall maybe how -- around what time it was -- you know, this final assessment was published on January 3rd. What -- around what time was it, what days, what period that we are talking about that Chief Gallagher comes to -- assistant -- Deputy Chief Gallagher comes to you and tells you about stresses, the fact that the third, January 6th, was going to be different than MAGA 1 or MAGA 2?
 - A land. I don't remember the specific days or times. I just know that we had those conversations about the assessment. But to remember specifics, I don't.
- 25 Q Is it fair to say that it would have been near the time that the assessment was published, so -- within that period?

A Oh, yes. Yes, that's absolutely fair to say. And if I'm not mistaken, it wasn't sent out until maybe later in the evening. So there were conversations taking place right up into the very end -- evening hours before that information was even pushed out.

Q Okay. And so then -- and the reason I ask is that I kind of want it know, then, before that period, let's say if the assessment comes out January 3rd, let's say we're doing this in the new year. In 2021 is when Deputy Chief Gallagher is coming to you and talking to you about these things.

Did you have a sense before that or was this the first time you had heard? Was it shocking or alerting to you -- alarming to you, excuse me, that, as you mentioned, this third event would be different and that potentially Congress would be the target this time?

A I don't know that I remember it being shocking or alarming. There was always an undertone of violence associated with MAGA 1 and MAGA 2. But I would say that the change is that Congress was going to be who the demonstrators were feeling this sense of animosity towards versus with MAGA 1 and MAGA 2 there were numerous groups that were engaging in civil disobedience against each other.

Q Were there any pieces of intelligence that you recall either being brought to your attention, either by Deputy Chief Gallagher in those conversations or in the period leading up to when the assessment is put out, that stand out to you as forming the basis for the assessment?

A I don't know if it was Chief Gallagher or Jack and Julie that may have brought that to all of our attention. And I don't remember, like, it was one specific thing.

There was a lot of open source kind of analysis, if you will, but a lot of emails, a lot of traffic that led them to conclude that Congress was going to be the target. So there was discussions about that. And I don't know that it was just from Sean and myself, but those conversations were taking place. I would say yes, and then from Jack and Julie as well.

Q And so I guess I'm trying to get a feel for how much of the traffic comes across your desk, how much of it you lay eyes on, and then how much of it gets to other leadership in Capitol Police all the way up to Chief Sund. Is it synthesized and analyzed within Deputy Chief Gallagher and below so that really it's just an assessment and the product that comes across your desk? Or did you have an opportunity to see specific traffic, specific posts that paint the picture that is forming the basis for the assessment?

A I would say no. We -- I am not an intelligence analyst, and that takes specific training and usually years of training. There's a whole process and procedure to that. That is not my role.

When they have analyzed this information from various platforms, from various entities and they have all of that together and they send a product up, that's when Chief Gallagher and myself are going to start asking questions based on the information we've received, based on the intelligence calls we're having with our partners. Sometimes we may receive calls directly from the Washington Field Office, from MPD, et cetera, saying certain things are exchanged at an executive level.

But, no, to answer your question, that analysis is taking place by those persons that are trained to do so.

Q So is it fair to say in the January 3rd final assessment had earlier versions in December? Is it fair to say that that product, as it is being shaped through December and then ultimately when the final one is developed on January 3rd, that is what you are relying on, in essence, for your intelligence picture into January 6th? There's no other either written, there are no emails of specific intelligence that are sent to you at your level. It really is the assessment that you are using for January 6th. Is that fair?

A I think that's fair. I think that if there are additional conversations between the director and the analyst, the director may have a conversation with -- if it was something that was jarring or jumping out at them. But overall, they're using that information to develop that assessment.

So, no, we're not getting those individual emails. I'm not scanning open source to see what groups are saying on Gab or 4Chan or what have you. I'm depending on my analysts to look at that, come up with a product. They're verbalizing their concerns and so forth. And then there is some oversight over them, and then we push that product out to the masses.

Q And that is true of not just you, but then other parts of Capitol leadership, I would assume. They are also not reading -- being sent or reading through any sort of specific lines, specific posts. They are also relying on sort of that threat assessment to make operational decisions. Is that fair?

A I think that's fair.

Q Can you tell us the reason that the threat assessment for January 6th was final by January 3rd and not continually updated as more intelligence came in on the 4th, 5th, and the morning of the 6th?

A I think there were some silos and gaps that we have identified, as we've discussed. There was information that came in that did not make it to the director of IICD. But I also think that some of that information -- if there were conversations about that, it was largely based on information that we already were aware of. A, there was going to be violence. B, we expected people to be armed. There were going to be hundreds of folks in town. We're looking at all of the hotels, camp sites, et cetera. So

- a lot of the information that was received was consistent with what the information was already provided in the assessment.
 - Q And so I just want to make it clear, because -- are you saying, then, the -- because my question was what was the reason, what was the rationale. Is the rationale that anything that came in after January 3rd was consistent with what had been produced in terms of the assessment and that is why no update was generated between then and January 6th?

A No, that's not what I'm saying. What I initially said was there were silos and gaps. So we know that there was information that came in, for example, to our task force officers that was not distributed up the chain, so the assistant director or a director didn't even have that information. But even after, you know, hindsight being 20/20, looking back at it, the information was consistent with the information that we already had. And then I named a couple of those variables, such as violence, individuals being armed, et cetera.

So I would say that there were gaps that we didn't have information. But looking back, that information was still consistent with what was in the assessment.

Q Okay. And so then I guess you can't tell me the reasoning why the threat assessment at the time, what the thinking at the time was for having the final one be on January 3rd and not updated?

A I think -- I don't know any other way to answer your question, than I do think that they didn't have the information in some instances. So there wouldn't have been a reason there. If I don't have a document to add to it, I don't have anything to update it with. And looking back, we identified within some of those documents that it was consistent with the information that we had.

Q Okay.

1	Mr. DiBiase. this is Tad. Can I just follow up on that question? I think
2	something that may help.
3	Chief Pittman. Okay.
4	Mr. DiBiase. What was our practice with putting out these types of assessment
5	in the past in terms of when we issued them?
6	Chief Pittman. So I don't have off the top of my head, like, do we have a specific
7	date it has to be out 2 days prior or 3 days prior. If we get something significant that
8	comes in, we're absolutely going to push out a revised assessment. So I don't know if
9	that helps or not.
LO	. I'm satisfied. I think I'll have a way of asking it as we move on.
L1	BY Example :
12	Q So you mentioned, you know, what Deputy Chief Gallagher highlighted to
L3	you, which is what the overall analysis is as part of the threat assessment on January 3rd
L4	For the record, I'll read it, a concluded quote: "This sense of desperation and
L5	disappointment may lead to more of an incentive to become violent. Unlike previous
L6	post-election protests, the targets of the pro-Trump supporters are not necessarily the
L7	counter-protesters as they were previously, but rather Congress itself is the target on the
L8	6th," end of the quote.
L9	Do you think that warning, particularly that Congress itself was the target and no
20	counter-protesters like the previous two MAGA marches, do you think that warning was
21	properly heeded by leadership at Capitol Police?
22	A I think that warning was listened to. I think there were operational
23	changes that were made, but it's hard to say properly heeded to when you have a Janua
24	6th. So if the tables were turned and we could go back, would there have been more done if you knew that that was going to happen? Of course you're going to do more.

But I think that at that particular time, the plus up of the CDU, civil disturbance units, the changes to the security posture, the changes that were made within Dignitary Protection, the deployment of with the exception of a few things here and there, essentially everything the department had, it wasn't enough. And there were some asks made after the fact. But, you know, knowing what we know now, it just wasn't enough.

Q I'd like you to run through those operational changes that were specifically made, in your mind, in response to this warning from the IICD. So -- and you ran through some of them. So if you could in detail, what changed, what was operationally changed because of this warning?

A So I don't have all of the lists right in here in front of me, but I can tell you that the times of the civil disturbance units were altered. The number of civil disturbance units, I believe we went from four platoons to seven. The number of officers assigned to patrol the grounds as well as the buildings, the number of special operations divisions officers that were deployed, whether it is patrol mobile response, the guys that drive around the grounds, our K-9 officers, having additional HDU, hazardous device units, that would deploy to investigate any type of bomb threats.

On the PSB side, plussing up all of our dignitary protection teams. I believe we went from four-man teams to six. We added additional supervisors, giving them additional weaponry, long guns. We had our countersurveillance units deployed from an operational period I believe up to 2 days before. Gosh, without having the total listing in front of me, that was assessed.

Chief Sund and Chief Thomas did an assessment of the grounds as far as the deployment of the bike rack on January 5th. They asked that that be redeployed, they thought, to give them a better tactical advantage over the demonstrators. There was a call on January 5th where all of those concerns were expressed from Chief Sund. He

- was the host of the call, if I'm not mistaken. And there was probably every law enforcement agency within the National Capital Region participating on those calls, to include all of the Federal agencies, as well as the State and locals, and the D.C. National
 - So on those calls it was -- the call was designated for the inauguration planning, but before they went into that, they went into January 6th. And that's when Chief Sund also requested additional resources on that particular call from Metropolitan Police Department as well as the D.C. National Guard.
 - Q And so let's unpack that a little bit. Staying within Capitol Police and what its resources, it sounds a lot of what you mentioned is plussing of resources, right, of manpower in certain divisions and areas. So I want to actually compare that to --

First, I want to make clear on the record, is it your testimony then that those pluses were not -- went into effect after the threat assessment? That is to say that the levels they were at before the pluses would have been before and then the levels afterwards is in response to the warnings by IICD.

16 A Yes.

Guard.

- Q Okay. And then the other end of it that I want to ask about is, on the morning of January 6th, before obviously there was any breach, before even members, people who are listening on The Ellipse even marched over to the Capitol, was the United States Capitol Police at full deployment at that morning or not?
- A Were we at full deployment?
- 22 Q Right.
- A Yeah. I'm not sure what you mean by full deployment.
- Q Sure. I mean -- and, you know, I need you to sort of help me in terms of what the language might be, but was every single member of the police force working that day?

A So to answer your question, no. We planned for an operational period that was going from approximately 6 a.m. on January 6th through the morning of -- or through the day of January 7th. So, naturally, you can't have officers here working 24-hour periods. So you stagger. We use what we call a staggering approach.

And I believe when the question was asked before for peak hours when we expect the groups to arrive on the campus and to cover that operational period that we think Congress is going to be in to count those electoral votes. We had 1,200 of the -- maybe it was 1,600 or -- I'd have to go back through the numbers -- of those 1,500, 1,600 officers available to us during that peak period. You save a certain reserve of those officers to come in and supplement those officers that have been here 12, 15 hours.

And for us, us as a department, typically we would do not work officers past a 16-hour period. So we try to stagger the group so that we are able to have full coverage throughout the night pulling from the 6th into the 7th.

Q And so, can you tell me, if you know, if you can ballpark for me, before the resources were plussed, what percentage of the force was that plan put in place for January 6th? What percentage of the force would be working on the morning of January 6th, and then what percentage did it shift to once you made all the pluses and planning?

A I cannot put that into numbers. One of the most significant ones was the plus up of the CDU. If we went from four platoons to seven, a platoon for us is 40 persons. And some of that, I believe we ended with 276 CDU hard platoon officers.

And what I mean by hard is they have specialized gear that was on the campus that day.

But to break it down in terms of how many we actually had that were strictly soft and hard to go to the plus up, I don't have it broken down in front of me or in my mind

1 that way.

Q And taking into account your answer about keeping some for reserves, right, for -- for the second sort of shift, I take it that from four to seven, seven is not the maximum number of CDU platoons, that there are others that were reserved for that potential second shift. Is that right?

A No. I would not say that that was necessarily accurate. Because in addition to CDU, Congress is in full session. And for Capitol Police, that means we're staffing all our garage posts, all our entry door posts throughout the campus. So CDU is just one component that would be dealing with, you know, the demonstrators. But we're also screening staff. We're making sure that the Members can go to and from.

So there's a routine operations that Capitol Police is conducting at the same time while they're dealing with any mass type of demonstration.

- Q So I think my question is, is seven CDU platoons the maximum? Is that full deployment for CDU?
- 15 A I believe so, but I will have to double-check.
 - Q So I want to go back to the threat assessment, that sort of, you know, overall analysis. That warning came on effectively the last substantive page of the threat assessment, page 13 of 15, where the last two pages were largely footnote citations.

So my question to you is: In hindsight, do you think that had an effect either on the ability for leadership or maybe the full department even rank and file, whomever, could that have affected people not reaching that last paragraph, that being the most critical piece of the threat assessment?

A I think that in hindsight -- well, not even in hindsight. It's probably a matter of opinion. And you tell me if I'm wrong. It sounds like you're asking should that have been on the first page, or should it have been put in red, or should it have been put -- that's just one entity of the assessment. You're also depending on those conversations that you're having with your staff.

So, yes, you have this on paper, but I need to be talking to my leadership team to say, this is the concern. When I'm giving it to my operational commander, I'm depending on my operational commander to have a meeting, so to speak, with his deputies, that that gets pushed down to the rank and file.

So whether or not it's placement within the paper, to me, is only one aspect of how you're communicating or what medium you're using to distribute any type of messaging. It has to be a holistic approach. It can't be just where you put it in the assessment. It has to be that communication.

And I think when PSB hosted -- or not PSB -- IICD hosted a call briefing to those operational commanders, and they're going over that assessment, they're not only distributing it via email so that someone has a paper they can hold in their hand and read, but I'm telling you, on a call, whether it's Webex or you're dialing in, what have you, I'm telling you that these are the concerns, and I'm providing you an opportunity to have any questions. I'm addressing those questions. So that personal touch or discussion is a component of that -- an important component of that as well.

Q So then, for example, on the second page of the assessment -- and I'll read it to you for the record, the quote. It says: "The protests/rallies are expected to be similar to the previous Million MAGA March rallies in November and December 2020, which drew tens of thousands of participants," end of quote.

What do you think about how -- you know, you've told me that a big thing that Deputy Chief Gallagher was highlighting was that January 6th was going to be substantively different than the first two Million MAGA Marches. And that is in the overall analysis, on the third to last page, that this was going to be different than those

- previous two marches. But that assessment, that paragraph on the second page reads somewhat differently, right? It says it's expected to be similar to the previous marches.
- 3 So what do you --
- 4 A I don't see what you're referencing.
- Q No problem. Let met get it for you. My apologies. I know it's difficult because we're not in the same room.
- 7 But if you look at the second page of the assessment -- you have it in front of you?
- 8 A Yes.

18

19 20 21

22

23

24

- 9 Q And under expected protests overview, the second sentence.
- 10 A Okay. I'm with you.
- 11 Q Okay, cool. And then, you know, obviously the overall analysis you've seen 12 before, that's on 13 of the 15, in which it says that this event is unlike the events on 13 November 14, 2020, and December 12, 2020, which are of course the Million MAGA 14 March rallies in November and December.
 - So, you know, I guess, can you explain to me whether that is problematic, could be confusing, particularly when one indication that there are similarities more -- it's earlier in the document versus the heart of it, the part that IICD wanted leadership to take away at the end?
 - A I think that it could. And I think that's where that in-person or command brief comes in. If I'm saying it similar in terms of the numbers that are coming but not similar in terms of those numbers directing the violence toward each other or opposing groups, counter-demonstrations, counter-demonstrators. But then I'm ending that conversation with, you all should know that this -- what we are expecting now is that they've had it out with each other, this is the last and final stop.
 - So I think that's why I said it's a holistic approach. But I don't deny that it should - be crystal clear so that there are no discrepancies. And those are the things that we

- 2 worked hard to change and clean up, so to speak, so that there's no -- so if somebody had
- to come back a year from now and read it, you're going have the same perception as
- 4 when we put that information out, and we're not going to -- we won't have to depend on,
- oh, but I had these conversations with them and I told them. Because we see now I'm
- 6 having this conversation with you what that can result in.

And maybe you can help me also in terms of where maybe the breakdown of conversation happened with this -- my last example with this is, I sent over the CDU Operational Plan, published on January 5th, 2021. So it was put together, obviously, after the threat assessment was finalized, and after that the January 4th conference call that I will ask you a little bit about in which, you know, it is being verbally expressed despite, you know, where it is placed in the text. Your point being, of course, those conversations were had and Ms. Farnam and Mr. Donahue are speaking at that

So if you turn to the CDU Operational Plan on the first page, and it says, the expected protests overview. It is in essence lifted. It's lifted basically, word for word, from that second paragraph we read in the assessment.

A Can you tell me where?

conference call about the concerns that they had.

Q I'll just read it, but it's exact same sentence. The protest's/rallies are expected to be similar to the previous Million MAGA March rallies in November and December 2020, which drew tens of thousands of participants.

So what, ultimately, gets put in the CDU plan is that first indication of similarity between the protests. And nowhere -- nothing else is lifted from the threat assessment. So not that final paragraph that actually says, as you've said slightly different, that the January 6th is going to be different in kind and degree than the two previous MAGA Million March rallies.

So my question is for you is where, if you know, where did that breakdown occur -- at least how it got translated to the leaders over at CDU where the important part of the threat assessment is not what gets copied and pasted into their plan, but it's that earlier version that makes it seem as though January 6th is going to be just the third of the two previous MAGA marches?

- A Thank you. Ask me the question again, Robin, just so I am clear.
- Q Sure. It was long, so I understand. To make it more brief, why do you think -- what do you think it led to the incorrect or the less salient, the not the important part of the threat assessment being reproduced in the CDU Operational Plan, given that you mentioned that there were conversations that there is this conference call, what do you think was the breakdown in communication? If you do -- and of course, if you disagree with the premise, let me know -- as to why, what was the meat of what was supposed to be taken by the threat assessment doesn't make it into the CDU operational plan?
- A I would have to say that there were silos. And I -- operation CDU

 Operational Plan did not fall under our area of responsibility. Were those -- that this does fall within their purview given the information, yes, they were. I would say I don't know. I don't have an explanation for why they didn't put it in or why that wasn't caught at some point. For that, I can't say, and look -- going back to the 5th and what was happening, there are definitely things that stand out, but the details of -- for lack of a better term, for someone else's operational plan and why they did or did not put that in there, it would be hard for me to speak on their behalf to say, we had these conversations, why did that information did not transfer to this document? I don't know.
- Q And one way, I guess, I can ask is did you or did Deputy Chief Gallagher or did Ms. Farnam or Mr. Donahue, the way it was set up previously -- and this may go to what you were saying about silos -- did you guys have an opportunity to have a say, to read, to edit this CDU Operational Plan; to look at it and say, oh, you know, that was the wrong thing to take from the threat assessment; I'm sorry, this should be the right thing?

Was that put in place, you know, before January 6th, or was that opportunity not there for you folks who know what the most sort of important parts of the intelligence are to affect what gets written in those plans?

A That communication was not there. So whereas we have IAP, we do now. We have a specific bureau that is funneling all of that information. I will say there is probably in the past, there was verbal communication between the executives that say this is what's important. But if that was someone's oversight for the CDU Operational Plan, like you're saying the meat of that assessment, what was most important, why that wasn't within the operational plan, and I don't know. Maybe Tad has it. I'm not sure who all received the operational plan.

So as I was stating before, this is just one form of communication. But if I am having a command staff brief, and I have my IICD director on there giving the meat of our assessment to them, regardless of what is in the operational plan, if I verbalize to them that this is what we think is going to happen, we still expect that information to be pushed out at the roll calls when they're getting together the masses that this is what we expect.

So I think to look at it individually, yes. And I agree with the assessment or the folks that have evaluated us and made recommendations that we should streamline things and make it so it's crystal clear, whether you are reading it today or a year from now how this information was gathered, how it was distributed, et cetera. But I do think it's still only one medium that that communication is taking place.

Q Okay. So you brought up distribution. Now, I want to talk -- this is I think my last question -- about the threat assessment itself. I want to talk about how it got

- distributed. So the hardcopy got distributed in terms of leadership of Capitol Police,
- 2 where?

A I know it was distributed to the command staff, but I would have to go back and pull that particular email or document to see exactly where it went. I believe it was command staff -- operational commanders, let me clarify. Operational commanders -- folks that would have been on the campus and having some role in the event on that day as well as to some stakeholders, which I believe included the Capitol

Police Board, House and Senate Sergeant At Arms, as well as the Architect.

- Q Okay. And what about to the rank and file? What is your understanding of how it got distributed, if at all, to them?
- A It's my understanding, now, that they did not receive a copy of the assessment. The way Capitol Police had operated in the past is that information would be shared with those commanders. Those commanders would post a roll call where they're sharing that information to the rank and file. But it is our clear understanding after the fact that that did not happen on January 6th.
- Q Let's talk about -- well, let me make sure -- well actually, no. Let's talk about a conference call, the conference call briefing on January 4th with Ms. Farnam and Mr. Donahue highlighting, you know, what they put together in that January 3rd assessment. Do you recall who spoke at the briefing?
- A I believe both Jack and Julie spoke at the briefing. I believe that Chief Gallagher? I wouldn't want to be a hundred percent because I don't remember all the specifics. I know that normally when we host a call, Sean is kicking it off, whether he gave any detail -- the specifics of who gave what, I'm not sure. But that's generally speaking how we do those calls.
- Q And you were present. Is that right?

1	Λ	Vac
1	Α	Yes.

- Q Do you know who was invited to attend and who was actually present, if those two are different?
 - A I believe all operational commanders. So that would have been our inspectors and above. And then in some elements like, for example, our hazardous device section or unit is led by a captain. So there may be onesies, twosies for captains here and there because we don't have an inspector. But anybody that is operationally in charge of a unit would have been invited. I don't remember right off the top of my head who didn't participate on the call, but I do believe that most of them did.
 - Q Okay. And I know this isn't a video conference, so is the way that you would have known whether someone attended or not is if their sort of name comes up?
 - A We have an executive officer kind of in an administrative role that would have been hosting it. That person keeps or is able to -- almost like the call we're doing now, you can see the participants and maybe identify them either by name or number. And I'm sure that that's what happened in that instance. We would have known from the person that was hosting the call who called in and who didn't.
 - Q You are saying, basically, operational inspectors and above, maybe a couple of captains on the bottom end. Can you tell me from the top down who you know was present?
 - A No, not off the top of my head. I don't remember everybody that was on that call. I believe Chief Sund myself, Chief Thomas, Deputy Chief Waldow, Deputy Chief Bowen. Gosh, I'm trying to think of who else. I can't remember exactly how many deputies we had at that time that would have been on there. I feel like I'm missing somebody. Of course, Deputy Chief Gallagher, who was then deputy chief at the time. So maybe that's all of them. As far as the inspectors, it's quite a few of them. And I - don't remember who all was on. But I do think that, for the most part, they

- 2 participated.

- Q All right. And so all those names you listed, starting with Chief Sund, those

- 5 A Yes. That is correct.

presentation of them?

- Q Okay. Perfect. After Ms. Farnam and/or Mr. Donahue finished their presentation, do you recall if anyone asked them any questions at the end of the
- 9 A No. Now, Ms. Harper may have remembered what I ate yesterday. The 10 days run together. I certainly don't remember what questions they would have asked a 11 year ago, you know.
- Q No problem at all. And so whether they asked a question or not, you don't know? You don't recall either way?
- 14 A No.
 - Q Okay. And I actually kind of want to make a distinction about when, you know, the operational changes were made. Was it your understanding that it was after this phone call, which was January 4th or earlier, or was it the highlighting of the threat assessment? Was it the threat assessment itself or the highlighting of the threat assessment, if you know, that changed the security posture for Capitol Police?
 - A I believe that there were different changes at different times. So as information was incoming. Based on the information we're receiving, it was changing. So whether it was the 3rd, 4th, each day right up to the 5th -- I do remember on the 5th riding with Chief Sund and Chief Thomas around the perimeter of the campus, so to speak. And Chief Sund was not -- he was not satisfied with the placement of some of the bike racks, and it could have been snow fencing.

But there we	re certain physical barriers that we	re placed around the campus tha	at he and Chief Thoma	s discussed having them adjusted.	And that was the day before.	I do remember that.	But there were other changes as i	information was coming in that folks were making.

Q Can you tell me about that sort of movement of the bike racks? What information was it that led to that change?

A As we traversed the perimeter, Chief Sund was concerned with the amount of traffic. We were expecting that whatever way that bike rack was laid out at the time -- and I don't remember the particulars -- there weren't proper egress routes.

There weren't proper -- it wouldn't be proper ways to tactically defend the campus. I do remember there was an exchange between Chief Sund and Chief Thomas on how far the bike racks should be placed out, closing of the plaza versus not closing the plaza. And I believe some of this discussion was guided by the Sergeant at Arms at the time.

And there were disagreements or a back-and-forth exchange. But I don't remember all of the particulars of what information and criteria they were using. But it definitely was discussed as we get towards the ground.

Q Oh, okay. So what I am asking in essence is, I believe I heard you say, or you brought up this example when I am asking about how intelligence drove a change in operations. So I was wondering what piece of intelligence, what new information was it that made Chief Sund feel as though the bike racks needed to be moved?

A So if you have intelligence that is saying that thousands of people are going to be traversing Constitution Avenue, and you see that you have the bike racks that could essentially set up traps for your officers, and/or for the pedestrians, if you have intelligence that says that -- and I'm just going to just kind of do some hypothetical.

Antifa is going to be traversing this route versus Black Lives Matter is going to be these groups separate. If I needed to encircle them or keep them closed off from one or the other, I'm going to make changes to my security posture. If I have intelligence that says that individuals may be trying to enter the buildings through the tunnels, or they're trying to come underground, there may be a tactical decision to plus-up the number of officers and supervisors that were posted at the Cannon tunnel or Rayburn tunnel, et cetera, so that you have additional resources there to handle anything that may come your way.

Q I am going to guess in terms of the placement of the bike racks on January 5th, was there any new intelligence, or was there something new that came out that drove that operational change? I think you mentioned -- you mentioned in the hypotheticals, but I am trying to pin down what actually you heard, or you received in terms of intelligence that led to that change. You mentioned numbers. I think thousands of people and potentially the movement over from the Ellipse. Was that new information? Or was that information that you guys had had long before the shift in bike racks on January 5th?

A I would say some of the information was new, but some of it was from a tactical perspective, Chief Sund was not -- he didn't like the setup. And then there was the Sergeant at Arms that weighed in on tactically positioning. If you have these groups coming, and they may be aggressive or violent, where should that bike rack be placed out to; how much ground should we be defending; what are we willing to give up? So I do think that those are, from an intelligence perspective, you're using that information provided by intel.

If I know a certain number of people are going to be armed, I'm going to move things, strategically, even where the placement of my teams, whether it's my CDU

1 response teams, the placement of the bunches, and things of that nature. So those 2 things were -- those conversations were had. All of the particulars of the operational 3 tactical changes I wasn't necessarily a part of, but I do know that those conversations were taking place. 4 Q I want to go into some individual intelligence received by IICD. First, I want 5 has anything that she wanted to ask about at this point. 6 to ask if 7 I am sorry. Can you hear me? 8 9 Okay. BY 10 11 Just one quick question about the Sergeant of Arms -- Hi, Chief Pittman. How are you? 12 13 Α Hi. How are you? -- what his role was or any conversations during the time period of preparing 14 15 for January 6th? I know you just mentioned him. So I am wondering what the communication was with the Sergeant at Arms. 16 I'm sorry, And how do I pronounce your last name? 17 Α thanks for asking. 18 Q lt's 19 Α It looks so much like mine. It's like, I feel like I should know. 20 But I believe your question was to what extent was the Sergeant at Arms playing a role in 21 the security posture? Q Correct. 22 23 Α The true honest answer is I don't know to what extent Chief Sund accepted their recommendations. I do know that they had concerns, particularly, with the plaza. 24

Naturally, the Members are going to be coming back and forth. I do know that there

- were conversation and kind of going back to squestion between the Sergeant at Arms and Capitol Police about encouraging Members to stay underground so that they wouldn't be interacting with the protesters on game day.

 But the specifics of those conversations and how much he may have adhered to
 - But the specifics of those conversations and how much he may have adhered to their advice or if it was a collaborative effort, I wasn't privy to that.
- Q So those conversations would have been from Chief Sund to Mr. Irving and Mr.?
- 8 A Stenger.

- 9 Q Stenger. Okay. Thank you.
- 10 BY
- 11 Q So Chief Pittman, I want to draw your attention to an email that was 12 forwarded to John Donahue, the director of IICD by an NYPD official on December 28th of 13 2020. The email notes, quote, assume you have. And it is sort of a listing of social 14 media posts. That site put together in the run-up to January 6th.
- 15 I'll just read some of them for you. I know I think you're trying to find it. So 16 while you do that -- well, you tell me if you want me to wait until you find it.
- 17 A You can start reading it.
- 18 Q Yeah, because it's --

Q No problem. It's in paragraph form. But, in essence, a lot of the postings say this. It's protesters should, quote, start marching into the Chambers. Quote, show up with guns and threaten them with death. They indicate that Trump's tweet, The Wild Protests, the one user said, quote, I read that as armed. Another said that violent insurrection has, quote, always been the plan. Another one says, quote, Trump can't openly tell you to revolt. This is closest he'll ever get.

1	Another says, quote, there is not enough cops in D.C. to stop what is coming.
2	Another says, quote, this is war, and we're clearly in a post-legal phase of our society.
3	Another quote, be there on the 6th ready for 1776. Another, quote, fun fact, no
4	revolution has ever been won without violence. And quote, kill the opposition.
5	I was wondering if these sort of postings, if you recall seeing stuff like this before
6	January 6th?
7	A I don't. I don't recall.
8	Q Okay. And do you think and, again, this may be speculation, but do you
9	think other members of Capitol Police or the operational side of the department saw
10	specific intelligence like this, specific lines, the specific line of rhetoric?
11	A If they would have seen these emails or just the general chatter? Do I
12	know if they saw that?
13	Q Yeah. In specifics. So having read things like this themselves, these sort
14	of specific rhetoric being brought to their attention.
15	A I don't know that to be true.
16	Q Okay. And so take something like, you know, indications of marching into
17	the Chamber, do you think that that sort of those sort of specifics well, do you know
18	why they weren't included in the January 3rd assessment? Let me ask it that way.
19	A No. No.
20	Q Okay. And you tell me if this is wrong, but do you think that it would be
21	helpful? Obviously, a threat assessment puts things together. There is general sort of
22	conclusions and thoughts and a threat landscape that gets put out there. But do you
23	think it would be helpful, that would have been helpful for leadership and maybe even
24	the rank and file to be able to see what is forming the basis of the warning; to sees the actual language that is being used such as marching into the Chambers, the other things that I indicated? Do you think that that would have been helpful?

A I think that's a tough question. You don't want to say that any information would not be helpful first and foremost. However, with that said, you do have conversations with your executive team, your executive staff to say, how am I going to mitigate any type of threat? What threat is most likely to happen on this campus?

So if I have a threat that suggests individuals want to march into a chamber, okay, how can I mitigate that? I have got CDU, Civil Disturbance Units. I've got hundreds of officers deployed. They have got less lethal munitions, or they've been trained to tactically defend the Capitol building. I have also put out calls to local law enforcement to say, I can probably get 500 more of these same level of trained officers to defend that type of threat.

So to say that that one specific, I think it's more looked at in terms of holistically, what am I going to do to mitigate if there's a suspicious package on the campus? Okay. I've got my hazardous response units deployed on the north side and south side. What am I going to do if there is an active shooter? So you train for these scenarios. I have got counter snipers strategically positioned around the campus.

So do I isolate one or a hundred emails? No, I'm looking for that analyst.

They're sifting through thousands of pieces of information. And so I need them to come up with that holistic picture. And then I am going to deploy resources that can handle or mitigate multiple types of scenarios. And I'm going to have conversations with my operational staff that say, hey, if (A) happens, this is what we're doing to do. And those were gaps that were identified that those conversations should have definitely have been more robust. And whenever we get into changes that have been made, those are things that I think we have addressed going forward.

Q So let me ask about what, you know, those conversations, in particular, was

1	the scenari	o of storming into the Capitol, occupying the Capitol, was that hypothetical, o
2	was that co	ontingency discussed?
3	Α	No, not in the manner of thousands of people storming or breaching the
4	building, fla	anking it on both sides at the same time. That particular scenario was not
5	discussed.
6	Q	And so you put a caveat in, not to that extent. So my question is, was the
7	scenario of	anybody storming the Capitol in any amount of numbers discussed?
8	Α	To me it's the same question, and the answer is no.
9	Q	Okay. Let me ask you about there is an email sent to you on January 5th
10	2021. I th	nink you're familiar with it, at 4:10 p.m. That Washingtontunnels.com had
11	been receiv	ving dramatic upticks in new visits. This was sent to you by Deputy Chief
12	Gallagher.	That the site, the Donald.win had been active in promoting photos of the
13	tunnel syst	em. And that Capitol Police had identified numerous open source comments
14	by groups o	of their intention of finding tunnel entrances and in confronting or blocking the
15	Members o	of Congress, including setting up a perimeter to block entry or escape.
16	And	I in that thread, once deputy chief sort of alerts you to this uptick in views with
17	the tunnels	s, that same day, January 5th, at 4:55 p.m. you forward that piece of
18	intelligence	e to Chief Sund, saying that you should hold a call regarding that intelligence.

Were you aware of that particular intelligence, the uptick in visits to the tunnels prior to that email that you forwarded to Chief Sund on January 5th?

A Yes. There had been previous conversations about individuals having information about the tunnels. And, Robin, I don't have the email in front of me. I'm very familiar with it. Does it also include Chief Thomas on it, too? Because I don't think it was just Chief Sund.

Q For sure. Let me get you that. It is -- and I did send --

- 1 A You did.
- 2 Q Okay. No worries. I just wanted to make sure.
- A I have a printout of materials in front of me. I do remember, and it's not the first time that I have been asked about this particular email. So I'm familiar with what you're talking about, but I wasn't certain that it didn't go to just Chief Sund.
- 6 Q No. You're right.
- A Okay. I make that distinction because you want to really have that conversation with the operational side of the House as well. And I apologize, but I had forgotten your original question.
 - Q No worries. Just to answer your question, yes, the Deputy Chief Gallagher sends it just to you at 4:10. You forward it at 4:55 to Chief Sund as well as Chad Thomas and as well as counsel, Tad.
- 13 A Okay.

- Q So I'm sorry, my original -- so my question to you, but my first question -- I think you answered it though -- was whether you had that information that intelligence prior to January 5th. And I think you said yes. Right?
- A Yeah, I believe -- excuse me. There were conversations about individuals having -- being aware that these tunnels existed. I believe there was chatter, excuse me, about some of the demonstrators saying things like the Members were going to try to hide and not come out -- traverse the plaza to go vote. They were going to try to use these tunnels.
- I also remember that, I believe, it was Assistant Director Farnam, when they did their homework and research on that, that information had been posted on the internet, I believe, for at least the last 5 years. So with all that being said, that's when the Capitol Police did make the determination to what we call plus-up the manpower at the tunnels.

- And it was also taken into consideration that the buildings were closed on the campus at
- the time due to COVID. So it's nothing the public would have access to getting down to
- 3 the tunnels anyway.

- 4 Q And so you said that the intelligence had previously been sort of discussed.
- Why then are you -- why is it being forwarded to you by Deputy Chief Gallagher? Is
- there something new that is being forwarded on January 5th that you say, quote, I know
- 7 everyone is busy, but I think we may want to have a really brief call on this intel. PSB is
- 8 seeing a significant uptick on groups wanting to block perimeter access to the Capitol
- tomorrow, starting as early as 600 hours. I know we are already spread thin, but even if
- we don't start CDU earlier, we may want to see what midnight teams we can pull
- together to address. I will come over to your office shortly.

through the tunnels that would cause some concern.

Does this not indicate that at least at the level of Chief Sund he hadn't been made aware about this tunnel intel? Or at least you seem to indicate that this is new information that you want to discuss?

A I don't know that I indicated that it was new information. And I don't know that I agreed that he wasn't aware of conversations prior to. But I do think that to air on the side of caution, even though the buildings were closed, there may have been conversations and a concern that specific -- and Tad, you tell me if I can't talk about this. But there may have been Members that would bring individuals into the buildings

So that's when, again, you'll see the plus-up for the tunnels themselves, to put additional manpower or resources. And now I'm thinking back, there probably were additional grounds, patrol officers to traverse the grounds to address, to mitigate that as well. So I don't know that it was necessarily new.

Q So then I guess my question is this, if everything in this email, the intelligence in this email is already known, why is Deputy Chief Gallagher sending it to you, if it's already something that he knows you know? And why are you forwarding it to Chief Sund, if it's something that you know Chief Sund already knows?

What is the purpose of on January 5th, near the close of business, sending this intel saying, we need to talk about this intelligence, if all of this is old hat and already been discussed?

A Let me give clarification. So I don't think that there were no conversations before. With that said, and this is -- I don't know the particulars from a year ago just specifically about that, but even if I put it into a hypothetical perspective to give it context, if we did not make operational changes to the tunnels because the buildings were closed to COVID-19, based on the information that we had before, if you see an uptick from the intelligence saying, there may be more people trying to come into these buildings and breach our security using the tunnels -- I know it's last minute. I know we're throwing everything at CDU or our operational posture outside. But maybe we should have a conversation about what can we do down in the tunnels, just in case there is a breach at a door, or we got Members bringing in certain groups that are causing a disturbance, or breaching our security protocols, and things of that nature. So I hope that kind of puts it into context.

Q What that sounds to me is that potentially you're saying that the uptick would have been new. That that is something that was different. There was an increase, and you wanted to highlight that increase and potentially do something about the increase.

A It could have been that that was new, I don't remember, specifically. And I don't know that the email captures the entirety of the conversation. But I do know, operationally, we did things differently, so there was a concern.

	Q	Okay.	And the	n in terms of t	then back	to the J	anuary 3rd	assessment,	this is som	nething	g that, yo	ou know,	you are bring	ing to the a	ttention	of the chief	f again, the d	ay before	e, Janu	ary 6th,	late into	the almost	close of bus	siness.	Deputy Chi	ief Gallagher	has raised	l it to y	ou as we	ell. This	was not a pa	rticular pied	ce of inte	elligence tha	at was includ	ed in the	Janua	ry 3rd as	sessment	. And you'r	e highlighti	ng it, ob	viously, 2 da	ays later.

Do you think that -- how would this piece of information get out to the department if the assessment that was completed days before is the only thing that is put out by the IICD?

A That's where that holistic approach comes in. It's not just the one document or the one form that you're communicating or messaging. If I'm having a conversation -- if I get some information January 6th at 3:00 a.m., and it needs to be put out, it's highly unlikely that you're going to go back and change your assessment unless it just has to be changed. But there is other ways of communicating those concerns.

So, you know, for law enforcement, a lot of times that information is going to be shared at our roll calls by those operational commanders; those folks with boots on the ground. You're giving it to them. You are holding those. And sometimes we do.

And I know this particular conversation is in reference to the 6th. But if you have some information that comes in last minute, you host an operational -- we have a protocol set up to call the command center. Everybody dials in. It's same thing. Those operational commanders are receiving that information so that when they're going back out into the field, they're sharing it with the folks that are more than likely that are going to have to engage these individuals.

Q Was the uptick in views to the tunnels, the tunnel system, was that shared, in your understanding, at roll call on January 6th?

A I don't know. That wasn't my area of responsibility. I didn't have a conversation with that side of the House about what they shared at the roll call. And those individuals are no longer here.

Q And is it fair to say then at that late period, January 5th, when you mentioned January 5th, at 3:00 in the morning, let's say, the only way that it would get down to -- because there is no update on the threat assessment, because there is no sort of new product that gets put out, the way the person -- the only person who would be able to communicate it down, the only other person on the chain would be Chad Thomas?

A Not the only person. So Chad is at the top of the organizational chart. If he receives it, then he could host a conference call with his deputies. If it's last minute, there is information that needs to go out. We have radios. We send messages to communications. There are other means of communicating that not just he has to say it. He is giving it to his people.

And I don't know if that happened, but I'm just saying it doesn't have to come direct from him. But he does have a means to communicate messaging. And no different than you would as things are changing, operationally, during while you're commanding an incident. And communications is one of the areas that broke down that day. But there are ways to communicate messaging. In situations as the information is changing or the threat is changing, you need to make adjustments.

Q I want to call your attention to another email, January 1st of 2021. In it,

Ms. Farnam forwards to Deputy Chief Gallagher, and others, some inspectors on the intelligence side. The intelligence that was sent by Shane Lamond from the D.C.

Metropolitan Police Department. And it came in from a civilian. That tip says -- this civilian says he lives right outside of D.C. -- I found a website planning terroristic behavior on January 6th during the rally. Agitators from out of state will arrive and will try to stir

- up trouble in D.C. There are detailed plans to storm Federal buildings, dress incognito,
- and commit crimes against public officials. I strongly encourage that the D.C. Police
- 3 Department look at the links below."
- 4 And one of the links is a detailed plan on storming the Capitol in D.C. on
- 5 January 6th. And the link is from the Donald.win site. Other links include direct threat
- to D.C. cops, calling for violence on January 6th, calling for shooting, calling for war in D.C.
- 7 So on and so forth.
- 8 I just want to first ask that particular piece of intelligence, including the supposed
- 9 detailed plan on storming the Capitol. Did you see it, that particular piece of
- intelligence, before January 6th, of course?
- 11 A I don't remember. I do remember a conversation about the Donald.win,
- but I don't remember the particulars. But I do -- that website is not foreign to me. It's
- not like, you know, this is the first time I've heard of it.
- 14 Q Okay. And I think I have already asked about whether in terms of storming
- the Capitol the conversations that were held with leadership on the operational side of
- the department. So on this one, you said, you don't recall if you saw that particular
- 17 piece of intelligence, right?
- 18 A No, I don't recall.
- 19 Q I just want to also point to December 28th of 2020. It's an email from a
- 20 so-called internet expert tracking far right extremism. She indicates that there are
- indications of storming the Capitol online for January 6th. Do you recall if you saw that?
- 22 It was sent to the Public Information Officer Or Office inbox at Capitol Police. Do you
- recall if you saw that particular piece of intelligence?
- A I would say that I did not see this.
- 25 Q And why is it that you feel confident saying you did not this versus the earlier piece, you said you weren't sure if you had? What about this makes it clear to you that you know you did not see this?

A When I received your packet, like I said, the Donald.win is not foreign to me.

I remember hearing that, maybe having a conversation about it. But this, when I received this in the documentation that you sent over, I know I didn't see this prior to.

Q Okay. In terms of storming the Capitol, just in terms of the intelligence, you do recall not specific pieces referring to it, but that there -- you knew that there were chatter about it online before January 6th? Or that particular scenario, storming the Capitol, you are not quite sure if you had been told that there was chatter about it?

A I don't remember the specific details about storming the Capitol. I remember having conversations about the Donald.win. If that encompassed storming the Capitol, I'm sure that it was probably said. I forget the second part of your question. But, yeah, that term or conversation is -- I am confident that that's not the first time I have heard it.

The PIO document would have gone to the Public Information Officer, and it says it's on the 28th. I don't remember this document at all. So I wasn't familiar with it.

But the Donald.win, I am familiar. But the specifics, the conversations at that time, I don't remember.

Q The last email I want to point your attention to is one sent by Ms. Farnam,
December 31st of 2020, in which she raises a concern that the permit requests for One Nation Under God and Bryan Lewis may just be proxies for Stop the Steal. And then she indicates her concern that Stop the Steal is the generally more violent group. And, you know, sort of indicating that this may -- it maybe more coordinated. Right? That putting in permits under different names. That really some of these, at least, are the same group. It's a larger group than what they're putting out there.

1	I want to ask you about what was made of this warning, but not in terms of
2	denying the permit. It's my understanding Capitol Police has not denied a permit
3	previously. So I am less interested in denying the permit. I'm more interested in that
4	warning. What, if anything, operationally, was done about it? The concern that we
5	previously think that these groups that are demonstrating at the Capitol are separate
6	groups, but potentially some of them might actually be the same group, and they might
7	be Stop the Steal, which is known to be violent.
8	A I know that there were conversations about this. I know that there was an
9	inquiry with Tad, a general counsel either between Chief Gallagher and Tad. It could
10	have been Chief Gallagher, myself, and Chief Sund. But I know that there was a
11	conversation about this concern with general counsel.
12	Mr. DiBiase. And, of course, don't talk about what that was. But I think he is
13	asking were there any operational changes.
14	Is that your question, Part ? Did we make any operational changes as a result of
15	deciding not to deny this permit?
16	I think that's "'s question.
17	Ms. Pittman. Okay. Got you.
18	I don't know that they made any operational changes. I would have to go back
19	and look through my notes. And you said that we've already answered the question.
20	We wouldn't have denied the permit. But I don't remember the particulars on it. I do
21	remember the conversations.
22	BY :
23	Q Okay. And so then you did at least for the record, you did, you were
24	aware about this warning that Ms. Farnam sort of elevated up the chain. I think it was
25	first to Deputy Chief Gallagher, but it made its way to you. Yes?

1	А	Yes. Yes.
2	Q	And were you a part of the conversations? And I think I get that the
3	conversatio	ns mostly centered on whether to deny the permit or not. But you were a
4	part of thos	e conversations. Is that fair?
5	Α	I think that's fair.
6	Q	The last thing I wanted to ask you is about the National Guard. What did
7	you think of	the role of the D.C. National Guard was originally set to play on January 6th?
8	I know for a	different department, the Metropolitan Police Department which works to
9	assist with t	raffic control points.
LO	And	did you agree, at least with the lack of a request by Capitol Police before
l1	January 6th	, did you before heading into January 6th see or envision or would prefer the 12	larger role f	or the D.C. National Guard, either outside the department in the streets of
L3	D.C. but also	o potentially to assist Capitol Police with civil disturbance?
L4	Α	I want to be sure I'm clear because you mentioned that National Guard had a
L5	different ro	le with I think you didn't say MPD, but it was with MPD to do traffic.
16	Q	Yes.
L7	Α	You're asking if or what did I think about National Guard either being
L8	requested h	ere to do traffic or be a part of the Civil Disturbance Unit? I just wanted to
L9	Q	Yes let me put it more simply. Let me put it more simply. Should there
20	have been a	larger role for the National Guard heading into January 6th?
21	Α	I know that the National Guard was requested. And I believe that the
22	National Gu	ard was needed on January 6th.
23	Q	And when you say it was requested, I'm sorry, do you mean by Capitol

Police; do you mean by Metropolitan Police Department? Who did you mean by you knew that it was requested?

1 A	I knew that it was red	quested by Chief Sund	l to the Capitol Police Board
-----	------------------------	-----------------------	-------------------------------

- Q And, of course, you mean that prior to January 6th, in the lead to?
- 3 A Yes, sir.

Q And what was your view about that request and what role they would play in your ideal world leading into January 6th?

A I agreed that we should make the request, and I also agreed that they should not be here in a traffic control -- and I don't even that that was ever even entertained like we were even thinking about bringing -- that was totally for Metropolitan. And maybe some from the Department of Defense may ask those questions, because usually they want to know what role you want to use them in. But Tad is, of course, our -- gives us guidance on what title we ask them for; if they're here in a law enforcement capacity.

And I think there is some different requirements. But I don't know that Capitol Police ever made the suggestion that they should come here in a type of traffic control situation. That wasn't our concern. It was more CDU.

Q Right. No, of course. And I know that that role was for Metropolitan Police Department.

My last question is about offers of assistance, if you're aware. You've been asked previously about it, and I know you were -- sometimes you had mentioned that you weren't familiar with it. I wonder if now that some time has passed you have become familiar with whether Capitol Police -- you know, some people use the word quote rebuffed or denied, let's -- more neutral. Denied assistance from DHS, from FBI, or DOJ - DOJ/FBI officials, from Park Police, some resources that they extended during January 6th. Do you recall those offers of assistance and whether or not they were accepted, and why or why not?

A First, let me say, you said that previously I said that I didn't remember if Park

Police, Metropolitan, and the FBI offered assistance?

Q It was not being familiar. I can quote. And previously: Are you familiar with Loudoun County reaching out to Capitol Police to offer assistance? I am not familiar with Loudoun County was your answer. Are you familiar with DHS reaching out to Capitol Police to offer assistance? I am not familiar with DHS was your answer.

And so that's only those particular two. But I'm wondering if either you have insight into either of those two or Park Police, FBI, and DOJ offering resources?

A So my answers are still the same. I am not aware of Loudoun County or some of the other local police departments reaching out to Capitol Police. I'm not aware of the FBI or the others that you mentioned as well. What I can say is that on that call on January 5th, that was really geared towards the inauguration. There was conversations about January 6th. And individuals on that call said they would be available to Capitol Police. One specific I know was General Walker for the D.C. National Guard.

I believe that there were offline conversations between Chief Sund and different persons, whether it was Sergeant at Arms. But to whatever extent he may have had direct requests from specific local law enforcement, I'm not aware of that.

And then I can also say that there was a discussion amongst the leadership, and -- well amongst the leadership about making a request for local police departments. We talked about it a little bit. The COG, the Mutual Council of Governments, and how law enforcement makes that request. I do remember those conversation. And, of course, that went into play on January 6th. But those specific ones you named, no, I'm not aware of.

Q And in terms of the D.C. National Guard, you said that Chief Sund -- you are aware of requests he made to the Capitol Board to have the D.C. National Guard be of 1 Is it your understanding that those requests were denied? assistance. 2 Α That is my understanding, yes. Q And you aren't yourself a part of those conversations. Is that correct? 3 I was not on the phone. Like I said, a conference call or anything like that. 4 Α 5 No, I was not. And the source of this information would have been Chief Sund? To you? Q 6 7 Α Yes. 8 Q Perfect. Thank you so very much. I am going to ask now that my 9 colleague, , continue with the questioning. I appreciate your time, Chief 10 Pittman. Α Thank you. All right. 11 Good afternoon, Chief Pittman. How are you today? 12 Mr. DeBiase. Hey, it's Tad. Could we just take a little short break for 13 14 her, if that's okay? I mean, for all of us. Absolutely. Do you want to take a 5-minute break? 15 Mr. DiBiase. Yeah, that would be great. 16 Chief Pittman. Perfect. Thank you, Bryan. 17 18 You're welcome.

And these -- this first bucket is not just limited to intelligence. Okay? But having the benefit of your experience and the hindsight of January 6th, all the OIG flash reports that have come out, all of the information that we've learned to date, from your perspective, what are some things that need to change within the Capitol Police in order to better prepare it to defend against something like this from happening again or prevent something like this from happening again?

And then the second bucket of questions, after we deal with the first is, what impediments, if any, do you think are in the way, whether they be political or social or fiscal, are in the way of the Capitol Police being able to achieve some of the changes that you think might be helpful?

So, with that table setting, let's start with the first bucket of questions, which is, what do you think -- and I'm asking you from a broad perspective. Again, I'm not limiting it specifically to intelligence, but given your current position, your former position, your time as the acting chief, what do you think are some of the changes that need to happen within the Capitol Police in order to better prepare it to prevent something like this from happening again?

A Thank you, for the question. There are a number of areas that needed to be reviewed from top to bottom or changed. But I would say some of the highlights would be communications, training. I would say technology. And maybe I'd throw in infrastructure under that technology piece. Staffing is a big concern, and then the equipment for the department.

Q	So let's take each of those in course.	So what is it about communication that you thi	ink needs to be changed within the Cap	itol Police?

A It crosses a number of bureaus. I'll give you several examples. Just within intelligence, and I know you said not limited to that, but the way that we were communicating within IICD, in particular, the relationship between the director, assistant director, supervisors, and the analysts, how they were communicating with the task force officers that are embedded with the FBI on their respective units, whether it's behavioral health analysis, violent crimes, the cyber task force, but making sure that those silos don't exist.

The sharing of information between the intel side of the House to threats and how countersurveillance is doing its operations. When you have a large scale event moving over into more so the Operational Services Bureau or the Uniformed Services Bureau, the way you're communicating with your officers, the rank and file. In law enforcement, we have what's called the incident command system. And it's basically a hierarchy of who's in charge, who's giving orders, who's giving direction.

But one of the lessons learned from January 6th is when you have a crowd of thousands of individuals communicating via radio, give either direction to your officers or to the crowd becomes particularly challenging. You cannot do that with just a bullhorn. The radios became overwhelmed, so the traffic is getting jammed. And then officers in the field are compromised if they can't hear, if they have on a ballistic helmet. So making sure that they have the proper equipment so that they can communicate effectively.

So I think those -- I think that was the first piece that you asked me about in terms of communication.

I would say as far as the executive team or the leadership, making sure that the leadership is communicating effectively first internally with each other and its staff, but also externally with the stakeholders. Are they getting the intelligence briefs? Are they being updated with the security posture? Are they being updated with the assessments so that everybody is pretty much on the same page.

Q Could we talk a little bit about the executive senior leadership team, since you brought that up. You know, it's clear to me in the time I've got to spend with your organization that the Capitol Police has a diverse portfolio of responsibilities. The people that you are charged to protect within the Capitol Grounds come from diverse backgrounds. And within the sort of line officer level, there seems to be a great deal of diversity in officers.

What are your thoughts about -- do you think that that diversity is represented in the senior leadership team? And if yes or no, why? And if not, what are some things we can do to address that?

A So, no, I do not think that diversity is represented enough within the senior leadership team. I think we've made stride -- strides to start to address that. We're really happy about the changes that we have made, but I think that we could always improve. And I think that we have to review our policies and procedures to make sure that from hire to retire you're looking at that and always keeping diversity in the forefront.

So once you're getting a diverse group of officers in the door or even on your civilian side, do we have specific programs in place that promote career development? Who are those individuals coming from diverse backgrounds? Are we having individuals review our policies and practices for promotions, for example, to make sure that they're fair and equitable to a diverse population so that I have just as much as an opportunity as other individuals to be on that scale, if I so choose? Are we recognizing -- do we have any type of talent acquisition that we're recognizing talent? And what are we doing in terms of mentorship or internship to make sure that we're developing that talent so that one day they would be in those executive chairs?

So I think that there is accomplishments that have been made, but there's definitely more work to do.

Q I appreciate that. And I appreciate you going through that explanation.

And it raises, in my mind, a question: What are some of the changes that you have made in that regard, in terms of the diversity in the senior leadership -- on to the senior leadership team issue?

A So I would just say, just in the last year, within this last year, we -- it hasn't been rolled out yet, and I see Tad giving me the eye.

Mr. DiBiase. No.

Chief Pittman. Okay. We have selected a diversity officer. That person will be reporting directly to the chief of police. And like I said previously for intelligence, we believe that the change starts at the top. So that person is in the process of completing background. So we believe in the next, you know, coming weeks or so we'll have somebody here that will specifically be looking at those policies, procedures, asking us as the executives, what are you all doing, what have you done? And then bringing us a plan, a roadmap, so to speak, where do we want to be 5 years from now, 3 years from now, and what things are we going to put in place to get there?

For example, on Tad's side of the House with general counsel, we've brought in some new folks to his side of the House with diverse backgrounds. Eventually, Capitol Police will be doing a promotional process. I know it's a priority of Chief Manger to make sure that there is more diversity within those upper ranks, your deputy chiefs and above. So all of those things will continue to develop.

On the recruitment side, I believe that the changes we've made is, maybe somewhere around March after January 6th, I assigned an inspector over the Office of Background and Investigations and Recruiting. We previously had a lieutenant. But as we all are aware now, we knew that from the recommendations from the OIG, as well as General Honore's report, there were hundreds of officers that Capitol Police have identified that were short. So we knew that we had to have a senior leader oversee that program from FY '22, I believe, to FY '26. We now have a roadmap to bring in hundreds of officers. And, with that, we are considering diversity at the forefront.

So we want to make sure we're tapping into historically Black colleges and universities, we're tapping into our Asian communities, we're tapping into officers from various geographic regions because members are all over the country. We've established regional field offices since January 6th. The first two are in Florida and California. So with the different regions, we know that there's different climates of threats. We want to have those relationships with local law enforcement so that we're addressing those members' concerns with boots on the ground.

So bringing in a holistic approach and having someone help create that roadmap for us from the time we bring them in on up to their career development I think is going to be key going forward. And we have done numerous things to start to address those concerns.

Q I appreciate that, Chief Pittman.

And that actually addresses the staffing question that I had. I'm sorry, I don't think we talked about that because I think you covered that well.

One of the other categories you mentioned that you saw a potential for improvement was technology. Tell me what your thoughts are about that.

A So when it comes to technology, one of the things that we did relatively quickly after the 6th was we issued all of our officers cell phones. As asked the question and as well as others, how are we distributing or disseminating that intelligence information? Should we still be having kind of old school conversations and just passing out information at roll calls? As we know that there are generational differences, a lot of times the senior management, like myself, are a lot older, but young people communicate a lot via technology, very -- you don't often see them without their cell phones. So that's a great platform to use to quickly disseminate intelligence information.

So now that they have those phones, we are able to give them a daily intelligence report. They receive daily products. And I believe the chief testified just the other day so much so that some officers feel like, whoa, you're giving me too much information. But we, as the chief stated, rather give too much than not enough. And we're able to quickly put out information as, you know, this threat environment around here is dynamic. It's constantly changing. So we're able to quickly push that information out.

I think more work has to be done in terms of the infrastructure and using technology to really survey this campus. And I know there has been a lot of discussion or displeasure expressed in regards to having an open campus. As we know, some of our peers or counterparts down at the White House, they have fencing. And I don't think that fencing is an only option to say that we can mitigate any challenges to the campus. But I do think there's a lot of other technology that other companies use, embassies use, other countries use that we should at least explore those possibilities. I think it's going to take a significant amount of financial resources.

If we did have some type of underground structures that could come up, if we change the landscaping to buy law enforcement agency time to slow down a crowd size the magnitude of January 6th. But I think now is the time to have those conversations

1	and say how much are we willing to invest in our safety to prevent a January 6th from
2	happening again.

Q I appreciate that, Chief. And that does cover nicely the infrastructure question which I had next.

So having spent some time talking about the things that need to be -- that need to be addressed and the changes that you've already made in that regard, looking prospectively towards the future, understanding, as you said, there's still work to be done in many areas, what, if any, impediments or obstacles are in the way of Capitol Police achieving that?

You know, one of the responsibilities of the committee is not just to identify what went wrong and how it went wrong, but also to identify and make recommendations for what we can do to prevent it from happening again, you know. And that's a pretty broad ledge, right?

And so, you know, from your perspective, based on your experience, what things do you think are in the way that we should be thinking about ways to either get under or over or through in order to help the Capitol Police get to where it needs to be or wants to be in the future?

A I think that one of the ways -- and, of course, there are many -- that the Congress could help Capitol Police is maybe some of that cultural change. And by cultural change I mean, some of it has to be a mind-set that we're not just going to be a reactive force, but we're going to proactively address future challenges that relate to security.

So I'm not just responding or I think by and large Capitol Police was taking an incremental approach to addressing security needs. And we -- we get that you have to be stewards of the budget, good financial stewards. However, sometimes there are limitations that I think that that has put us in that we've had to make hard choices. I've got to -- the budget is only so big, and I can only address so many things within that.

So maybe constant analysis and review on what are we looking to address in the future, not just what's in front of us but what we think is on the horizon, what's coming, whether it be some type of cyber type of threats, what are we doing to address, again, the infrastructure?

By and large, I've been here over 20 years now. I came on right at 9/11. And I believe that was probably under Chief Terry Gainer that we first started to change some of the infrastructure around the campus. So prior to that, those barricades and barriers in the streets and things, none of that existed. It was much more open. And I remember the opposition that he faced when he made those suggestions back then. Folks did not want those things in place. And now we've adjusted. But by and large, it's been the same.

So maybe a cultural mind-set that says security has to be constantly evolving and you don't want to be behind the eight ball, you want to be in front of it. So what are we doing as a community to address our needs before these types of events have a possibility of happening?

Q Understood, ma'am.

And it raises a question in my mind. You know, the United States Capitol Police is unique in that you have over 400 individual clients, right? And each of those clients have support and staff. And so there's a lot of, at least from the outside looking in, a lot of sort of external -- what I'll call external input into Capitol Police operations.

From a perspective of who has the final say in what the security posture should be, whether that is strategic, to your point, being proactive and strategic thinking about stuff in the future or tactical, do you feel as if there's a right balance between the Capitol

Police as sort of the people with the expertise to carry that out and the clients, or is there some sort of imbalance that maybe we need to think about addressing?

A I think that it's somewhat balanced. I think that there's a great relationship between the chief of police as well as the Capitol Police Board. I do think that it is a challenge, particularly at times for the chief to make security decisions, when you can be -- when you have a lot of folks that you have to answer to. So I do think the chief needs to have a certain level of autonomy to make security decisions. Because, for me, at the end of the day, the chief is going to be held accountable for whatever successes or failures take place relating to security on the campus.

So, in my mind, if I am going to be held accountable for having CDU and posturing them, or bike rack, or fencing, I want to own that. And I don't mind taking on the responsibility, and I know others don't as well, but give me that flexibility to do my job.

Q Thank you, Chief. I appreciate your time. I think those are all the questions that I have for you. So, again, thank you for your time.

I'll turn it back over to Robin to see if he has any additional questions.

A Thank you.

BY :

Q Yes. Chief Pittman, I just kind of wanted to run through your day on January 6th. So if you could just start with where you were from the morning until you started to get word or you started to see the crowds from the Ellipse move over, march over to the Capitol.

A The morning of January 6th I responded, and I don't know what time. I'm sure it was in the wee hours of the morning. Responded, and I believe there were a few briefs or meetings, but primarily the command staff was in the command center. And there were incidents happening. And I don't have my timeline in front of me, but very

- early on, Capitol Police was taking calls of a man with a gun in this part of D.C.
- 2 Metropolitan was making arrests.

So as we are taking in information, we're pushing out that information to our officers. I had countersurveillance teams out and deployed. We also had some Members, if I'm not mistaken, down at the Ellipse, so we had dignitary protection deployed outside as well as inside of the campus.

But as the morning continued, I believe that it started with the bomb threats. I don't remember the exact time of the first one. I believe it was around between 10 and 10:30, 10:38, something like that. We started making decisions to handle each of those threats. So it started with the bomb threats. I think there were several arrests of individuals with guns. And then we had the suspicious person in vehicle where there were explosives found. So all of this is occurring before the crowds started to come on the grounds.

- Q Do you recall whether Vice President-elect Harris was in the DNC at the time that one such device was found outside of the headquarters there?
- A I don't recall that from that day, but I've since, of course, seen that in various reports. But I don't recall that from that particular day.
- Q So as you're sitting there in the command center through this morning, hearing these reports, as you said, of the explosive devices, purported explosive devices and certain arrests, who's there at the command center with you?
- A Chief Sund, Chief Thomas, I believe Chief Gallagher, Tad, probably Jack

 Donohue -- not probably -- Jack was there. I can't remember if Julie was there. Maybe they both were in the command center. It was a full house around the dais, so pretty much all of the operational commanders, with the exception of Deputy Chief Waldow was out in the field. And I can't think of anybody else right now. I'm pretty sure I'm

- forgetting somebody. But for the most part, the command staff was in the command center. The executive team was in the command center. And we did have an
- 3 operational -- a couple of field commanders out in the field.

- Q And so as these, you know, calls are being fielded, what are -- what is your role that day as you understood it? What was it that you were sort of going to be heading?
 - A So my primary role is always going to be for the Dignitary Protection Division and being responsible for the congressional leadership. So within Protective Service Bureau, if there is a hierarchy, so to speak, DPD and making sure that the leadership is safe is going to be priority number one. Making sure that you have sufficient resources in place to ensure their safety, if you needed to relocate to another position, what have you. That's the primary responsibility.

All of those other, whether it's countersurveillance, threat units, intelligence units, they are feeding the beast, so to speak. They're feeding that operational center to ensure that you can make sure that priority number one is taken care of.

Q So as we're still here before any of the crowds have shifted over and there were, as you said, some bomb scares elsewhere and some arrests, is there anything that requires you to either shift resources or as it pertains to your area of responsibility, or is everything sort of -- again, before the crowds are moved over, nothing is either out of ordinary in terms of your sort of area?

A No. There are requirements that -- tactically speaking, there were some changes made that I probably wouldn't go into detail on this call in an open forum. But, yes, tactically speaking, there were changes made as the crowds became more violent or there's more people. We need to move differently so that we make sure that we have a backup plan if things go left.

Q So can you just go through, without getting into details, to who was moved where? Just what were your concerns I guess? Again, this is before, and if there's any marching from the Ellipse before the President's speech, what were in terms of, you know, your area of responsibility protecting the Members of Congress, what were your concerns that you were seeing out there that made that precipitated these tactical changes?

A You're always concerned if you need to have movement of the leadership as well as the congressional body. You need to have routes in place or resources in place to make that happen. And so you make tactical decisions based on the information you're receiving. So if there is a need to get folks out that, you can do that and do that in a safe and efficient manner.

Q But I guess my question is about what was happening on January 6th. Was there anything, at this point in the story, that led you to think that you needed to either change those plans or go through with those plans in moving congressional leadership?

It's my understanding at this point the certification is still scheduled to move forward. The Vice President makes his way to the Capitol around noon. Is it fair to say that nothing major is changing at least until or before the crowds move over from the Ellipse?

A Yes. Yes. That is correct. Yes.

Q Okay. So maybe lead me to the first moment that something does change in terms of the security picture in your area of responsibility, of course, on January 6th, whenever that happens, whenever it is that you first start to realize that there is something afoot.

A I don't know if it's when maybe we're at the third device -- and all of these things are kind of happening simultaneously, so it is hard to pick apart, oh, this was the

- trigger, and when this happened, we did B. It wasn't necessarily one thing, but things
- are happening pretty quickly and at the same time.
- But at some point, there was an evacuation of the Cannon -- or part of the
- 4 Cannon. And I'd have to go back through my notes, Robin, to see when we started to
- say, you know, we need to reposition. I would say it had to probably be a little later as
- the crowds are getting larger and more aggressive. And what exact time that happened,
- 7 I don't know. I used to have the timelines remembered from the hearings, but I don't
- 8 have it off the top of my head.
- 9 Q I'm less interested in times and more just what you're observing.
- 10 A Okay. We're observing aggressive behavior. The officers at this point are - being attacked.
- 12 Q Well -- Capitol Police officers at the Capitol Grounds?
- 13 A Yes.
- 14 Q Okay. Well, let me back up a little bit then. Were you guys -- were you
- listening at all to the President's speech at the Ellipse?
- 16 A We had it on. It was on in the command center.
- 17 Q And, again, you tell me if you recall this, if it stood out to you when the
- President mentions, you know, we're going to go march now, right, he made it appear as
- though he himself was also going to go from the Ellipse to the Capitol. Did that stick out
- in your mind? Did that worry you? Did that concern you? What did you think about
- 21 that?
- A To put it in context, we have phone lines blowing up, radios blowing up,
- hundreds of officers starting to engage, and that was well before the President's speech
- 24 ended. I do remember that from the timeline. So if the protesters started marching
- here at 12:30ish or 12:38, 12:40, for some reason that sticks out in my mind, I don't think

- the President's speech concluded until 1 o'clock or 1:10. So we were having problems
- on the campus well before his speech ended. So we would have been mitigating threats
- before he says whatever he said. So we're putting out fires well before that speech
- 4 ends.
- 5 Q Okay. And so you're alluding -- how did you figure out that some of the
- 6 group at the Ellipse were peeling off and already starting their march to the Capitol
- 7 before the President's speech had even ended? Who -- how'd you get that intelligence?
- 8 How did you figure that out?
- 9 A We have folks in the field. We have a robust camera system within the
- 10 communication or command center. We have every law enforcement agency in the
- region represented. So on days like that, you're getting intel from MPD. MPD has an
- operations center or a JOC set up. Park Police, Secret Service, all of those commanders
- are housed within the Capitol Police Command Center. So you're getting information.
- 14 That way you're getting information from our folks that we have out in the field, we're
- 15 getting information from their folks, and we're monitoring the campus via the camera
- system.
- 17 Q And so had you -- was that a surprise to you at all the sort of marching from
- the Ellipse to the Capitol or was that -- was everyone basically anticipating that that was
- 19 going to happen?
- 20 A Yes.
- 21 Q You guys foresaw that -- previously -- that that was going to happen. That's
- what you're saying yes to?
- A Yes, I am saying that we foresaw that there was going to be demonstrations
- on our grounds.
- Q Okay. And so before -- as you see these crowds peeling off, before they interact with any Capitol Police officers, is there any warning that you receive intelligence as you could see plainly before your eyes with the cameras or from your partners there, anything that tipped you off about the tone or the mood, let's say before they get aggressive with the officers at the racks, at the bike racks?

A We were getting information about the tone, some of the things that people are marching and saying. But we're also aware of the arrests that are being made, and that is a serious concern to us, those individuals that are armed. So we want to address those things.

But as far as a crowd itself being violent before they reached the grounds, there was no intelligence that were saying we've got a group of 30 that are armed and they're doing A, B, C, and D. So it's, like I said, a lot of moving parts on the day of, between that, the pipe bombs being placed around the city, around -- adjacent to the campus, as well as that vehicle that had the explosives and ammunition in it as well.

Q And so before there's any interaction between the protesters and police, it sounds as though there were two things, the sort of arrests from that day, which I take it dealt a lot with folks being armed. Is that right?

A Yes. Arrests, reports of folks being armed, reports of MPD arresting individuals with weapons. Then the first suspicious package I believe was in front of the court. That was the very first one. And then the pipe bombs that we had to address as the day progressed.

Q And the second piece of that you mentioned is you were hearing reports about rhetoric, violent rhetoric. Do you recall some of what you remember hearing? Do you recall or did anyone advise you of threats to the Vice President or maybe animus towards law enforcement officers being traitors or so on and so forth? Anything like that that you -- was being told to you?

1	Α	I don't recall the specifics from that day, like in the manner in which you
2	asked the q	uestion, no.
3	Q	In terms of the rhetoric, you don't recall what sort of but you do recall

A Yes. Yes, I do. Yeah.

being told about some of the rhetoric. Is that right?

Q Okay. And then you -- so now at this point you mentioned that there was aggression between, once they reached Capitol Police, between Capitol Police and the rioters. So just walk me through what you're seeing and what you're doing -- you yourself of course -- throughout the -- throughout the attack.

A So I want to say initially they started to engage the officers. We're watching it on the west side of the campus, probably on the Pennsylvania Avenue walkway. You'll see the exchanges between those -- and those officers kind of back up. We also are watching the engagements or interaction between those on the east side, because it's happening almost at the same time.

So my role doesn't change as far as what my primary area of responsibility. At that time, the leadership is safe. The building hasn't been breached. The legislative process continues. So -- but we are paying attention. There's definitely communications between the countersurveillance units and the DPD agents, inside, outside, making sure that we are tracking the movement of leadership and such.

Q So walk me through when maybe something does change in terms of potentially when backup from MPD is called. When is it that the aggression escalates and a change in resources is required or requested?

A I would say that the aggression escalates between -- 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock would be probably the peak times of the aggression. MPD is called probably around 12:58, 1 o'clock, give or take, you know, a few minutes here or there. They arrive.

- 1 They -- very quickly they start to engage. At that time, they are still -- the Capitol still
- 2 hasn't been breached. But DPD is starting to posture as they're moving closer to the
- buildings. And I don't remember the exact time of the breach, but then that's when we
- start to say, okay, we've got to make moves to get the leadership out.
- 5 Q And so is that when -- is that sort of your area of responsibility?
- 6 A That is exactly my area of responsibility. Yes.
- 7 Q Okay. And so what do you start coordinating and doing?
 - A I wouldn't feel comfortable having that conversation on this call about how we evacuate the leadership or how we maneuver to put things in position to move them.
- 10 I -- I'd rather have that in a more closed forum.

- Q I guess I'm less interested, again, in where people ended up or who led them where. I'm interested in what you did. So what are -- what are you literally physically doing? Who are you calling? Who are you talking to? What are you -- I'm making -- what are you making? What are you constructing? What are you coordinating? That's what I'm interested in you talking about, if you could.
- A Yes. And I think for me it's probably one and the same. So I am giving direction to Chief Gallagher and I believe it's Inspector Snyder. They're reporting back to me. We need to move person A to a specific location. We need to reposition vehicles and stage so that they get out safely. So I'm coordinating those movements. And then I need to have accountability so that we can report back to the Sergeant at Arms that these individuals have moved to location X and they are safe.
 - Q Who are you speaking with mostly on the ground over at the Capitol?
- A The Sergeant at Arms representatives, as well as intermittently Chief Sund and the Deputy Sergeant at Arms for both the House -- well, I'll say for the Senate. I'm not sure of the individual's title on the House side. But I have a House side Sergeant at

1	Arms repres	sented as well. That communication is constant.
2	Q	Are you aware of who maybe Chief Waldow is Chief Waldow is at the
3	grounds of (Capitol, right?
4	Α	Yes.
5	Q	And I think he's sort of also serving as a person on the ground, kind of
6	feeding info	rmation back to the command center. Is that correct?
7	А	He's I don't know if he's feeding information back to the command center.
8	He is on the	grounds at the Capitol because he is the CDU commander. So those guys
9	out there th	at are fighting and having being attacked by the protesters, he is in charge
LO	of those ind	ividuals.
l1	Q	Within the command center, I guess, and I think you mentioned maybe
L2	Deputy Chie	ef Gallagher, but is there any one else who you're sort of corresponding with
L3	and speakin	g to?
L4	Α	It would be Inspector Snyder. There were probably and I can't remember
15	who the DP	D supervisor that was in the command center that day, but there was a DPD
16	supervisor.	There was also a supervisor that's in charge of this countersurveillance unit
L7	that came in	nto the command center. Inspector Mitchell was in charge of the threat
L8	assessment	s section, so she was there.
19	So I'	m communicating with them from Protective Services Bureau, as well as the
20	Sergeant at	Arms representatives that are in the command center.
21	Q	If you could just then go on now. You know, we've had the breach you
22	mentioned	and you're coordinating moving Members and leadership to safe places. If
23	you could ju	ist go on as to what happens next in the day for you.

So what happens next in a day for me is I start coordinating with those same

Deputy Sergeant at Arms and a House side representative on the movement of the actual

24

- body, the entire Congress, you know, the House and the Senate. So we have specific locations that are designated that we trained, that if there is some type of compromise of
- those Houses, we need to move individuals to their safe location.
 - And, of course, that was challenging that day because a lot of individuals were barricaded in their offices, locked in, or routes may have been blocked. So I'm coordinating with the Sergeant at Arms as well as the boots on the ground. We had CERT teams within the building that were going in and extracting Members, as well as their staff, to get them to those safe locations.
 - Q You mentioned to us previously that the command center was overwhelmed, some people were not making decisions, and so you started making operational decisions outside of your area of responsibility, which included locking down the Capitol.
- 13 A Yes.

- 14 Q Can you go into that, please?
 - A Yes. So I believe the time at this point is maybe a little before 2, right around 2 p.m. I ordered a -- the first lockdown was of the Capitol Building itself.

 Based on my operational experience and years that I spent in Uniformed Services Bureau, the Capitol division is trained in that respective area that procedurally they can lock the building down. And what that means for us is nobody in and nobody out. And that's regardless if it's police officers that are outside of those doors and what have you. It could be Members. It doesn't matter. When you order a lockdown, nobody in and nobody out.
 - In addition to that, I started the coordination for getting the law enforcement -- additional law enforcement assets here on the campus and then getting them deployed. So I do remember that General Counsel Tad was doing the administrative part of sending over the paperwork that needs to be signed so that we can start to call in PG County, Arlington. We had folks come -- law enforcement agencies come from as far away as the New Jersey State Police.

So coordinating that is pretty -- a pretty large responsibility because, not only do you have to make sure that they are protected under the law, they have to be sworn in. There are some basic principles that you need to go over regarding use of force and how you're going to deploy. There are specialized units. But you need to have accountability. If you are bringing in, I believe -- looking back, we probably brought in about somewhere between 1,200 and 1,400 outside police officers. We have to know where those officers are and what they're doing.

So we started -- so I started to take Protective Services Bureau resources, as well as the chief's staff, to set up operations adjacent to headquarters building, specifically lot 16, so that we could have a check-in procedure for those units so they could stage vehicles. We know from previous large scale events, for example, the Navy yard, one of the things that can happen is if you have hundreds of resources coming in and you don't stage them appropriately, now you lock up the whole campus. Nobody can move because you got cars here, fire trucks there, ambulance. It has to be done in an orderly fashion.

So I started staging those resources and coordinating with FBI as well as Metropolitan. I had several conversations with Chief Contee throughout that time period, during that -- during the peak of what I would say were the breaches during that day. So coordinating those outside resources.

And then I also pivoted to coordinating, how do we go to our plan B? We have rehearsed or practiced and trained to have alternative locations and sites set up so that if Congress decides continuity of government -- if they decide that they want to convene

1	somewhere else, I started putting in or giving direction to put assets and resources in
2	place so that when that decision was made, we've already enacted those plans.
3	Chief Pittman. Is that okay? That's not too far?
4	Mr. DiBiase. Uh-uh.
5	BY ::
6	Q In terms of lot 16, did you go there personally or coordinating by phone with
7	someone over at lot 16?
8	A No, I did not go there personally. I directed my staff to go there.
9	Specifically it was Inspector Jeanita Mitchell and Lieutenant Maria Willis.
10	Q And you talked about that sort of being the place to stage vehicles but also
11	as the location maybe for swearing in of certain officers.
12	Guard ultimately were sworn in before responding, if you know?
13	A I cannot say that all of the D.C. National Guard was sworn in at that location.
14	There may have been a large contingent of D.C. National Guard, because D.C. National
15	Guard came much later. And I don't have the timeline of which groups came when.
16	But to start the process going, I put the Protective Services Bureau out there. I
17	can tell you they didn't even have appropriate attire. We dress in plain clothes or the
18	folks that work for us. But they grabbed whatever they could find, police jackets, went
19	out and set up the tables so that they can track each and every officer that's here.
20	They're giving the appropriate swearing in and use of force messaging, and then
21	deploying them, sending them where we need them to go.
22	Because like we know now, there were breaches on both sides of the buildings
23	and these folks are inside of the Capitol. So you have to deploy them with your officers.
24	They don't know the layout of the land. We're telling them to respond to north
25	barricade. They don't know the north from the south. So how do you communicate

- with them? You have to have an officer with a radio and so forth. So all of that takes quite of bit of coordination before you can start deploying those units. So that's what I started doing in addition to the Protective Services Bureau responsibilities.
 - Q Were you a part of any conversation or had the opportunity to overhear a conversation between Chief Sund when he was making a request for the D.C. National Guard? There's been a lot of it in the press, a 2:30 phone call to DOD officials. I'm just wondering if you had any visibility into that call.
 - A I did not. I saw Chief Sund on the phone, but I -- no.

- Q Okay. If you could just wrap up by -- you know, I think you've laid out what you were doing during much of the breach, during much of the sort of the peak moments of the attack. How did the rest of your night basically end?
- A Chaotic. Bringing in those additional resources. By that time, as the evening progressed, there was constant communication between myself and the deputies. At some point, I knew that they were to their safe locations. You're getting less reports of folks being barricaded. Then the Congress has to make a decision on whether they're going to reconvene that night or are they going to reconvene here or in another location. So still putting in resources, assets in place, if they determine they want to reconvene elsewhere.
- But in addition to that, we need to now conduct sweeps and continuously get these folks out of the building with the help of Metropolitan and all the other law enforcement agencies. We were able to bring in, I can't tell you how many K-9 teams from around the region. The FBI helped us out tremendously.
- But the Capitol Building, as you know, is a huge building. And we need to search every square inch where we know these individuals have gone, that they didn't leave any devices -- we had dealt with the bombs all day -- behind, so that if and when the Congress

1	does reconvene, they can do so in a safe manner. So we continue to push individuals
2	out.
3	There were, I think, 40 40 or so arrests toward the end of that evening. I can't
4	remember exactly what time. I do remember sitting with the MPD commander, it was
5	Jeff Carroll, and Assistant Chief Carroll and Assistant Chief Morgan Kane in the
6	commander center. But I can just remember seeing the last of the CDU units pushing
7	those folks out, down the avenues. And once we concluded the sweeps, the Congress
8	did convene. And I don't know I think that could have been 3 in the morning. It
9	is that was a long day. So I don't remember the exact time, but they did reconvene
10	and they reconvened here.
11	Q And were you still at the command center at the point that they reconvened
12	to continue the session?
13	A We were still here, yes.
14	Okay. I'm going to now ask if I said it wrong.
15	I say it always wrong if she has any questions.
16	Chief Pittman. I think you're muted.
17	She's muted.
18	Okay. I just have one question about the kind of towards the
19	end of the clearing of the Capitol. Did you have any interaction with or remember who
20	in particular you interacted with from DOJ or the Bureau or DHS for any matters, anyone
21	stand out at you?
22	Mr. DiBiase. , it's a hill hard to hear. I don't know, something maybe
23	with your mike. We're having a little hard hearing you. We cranked it up too.
24	Let me see. Can you hear me now?
25	Mr. DiBiase. That's definitely better, like, leaning in maybe.

1	BY :
2	Q I just want to ask if you have any sense of who took over kind of leading the
3	coordination to clear the Capitol. Was it your sense that Federal agencies were taking
4	that role or was Capitol Police in charge?
5	A No. It was definitely Capitol Police. I assigned, and I don't think he was
6	deputy chief at the time, but it was Jason Bell.
7	Mr. DiBiase. He was not.
8	Chief Pittman. He was not. Okay.
9	So it was Inspector Jason Bell that coordinated with the individuals that we had
10	from the Federal asset. So I believe Steve D'Antonio(ph), and I know I'm probably
11	royally messing up his last name. Steve came up, was in the command center. We
12	probably had some ATF representative. And I don't remember I work with Steve all
13	the time, so that's why I know he was there. But there were some other Federal
14	agencies that came up and offered their assistance. But Jason Bell was the lead
15	coordinator, along with our Capitol Police assets, our dogs going over and participating in
16	those sweeps.
17	Q So it's your understanding that Jason Bell was coordinating with those DOJ,
18	FBI, ATF reps on the ground?
19	A He was.
20	Q Okay. That's great. I'd been wondering who that person was, so I
21	appreciate you identifying him.
22	I don't have anything else,
23	Thank you again for your time. I know this is probably the multiple times
24	you've testified about this issue.
25	Chief Pittman. Thank you.

1	Great.
2	My last question is if there's anything that we didn't ask you that you wanted to
3	share with the committee.
4	Chief Pittman. Nothing that I can think of.
5	With that, we very much thank you for your time and your
6	frankness in speaking with us.
7	Have a good afternoon, everyone.
8	Chief Pittman. All right. You too.
